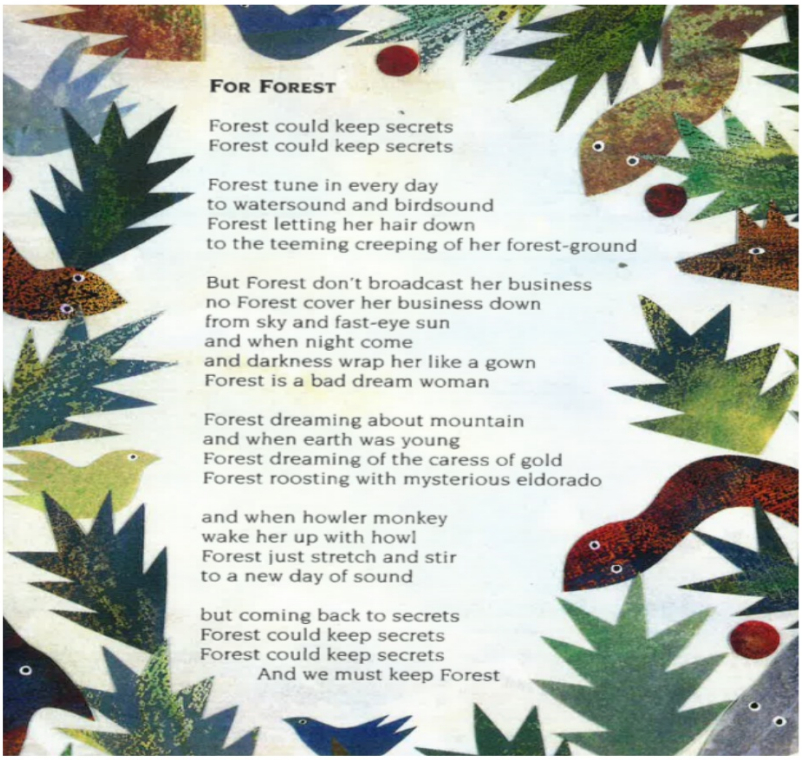
I can plan writing a poem



For Forest

Forest could keep secrets
Forest could keep secrets

Forest tune in every day to watersound and birdsound Forest letting her hair down to the teeming creeping of her forest-ground

But Forest don't broadcast her business no Forest cover her business down from sky and fast-eye sun and when night come and darkness wrap her like a gown Forest is a bad dream woman

Forest dreaming about mountain and when earth was young Forest dreaming of the caress of gold Forest roosting with mysterious eldorado and when howler monkey wake her up with howl Forest just stretch and stir to a new day of sound

but coming back to secrets
Forest could keep secrets
Forest could keep secrets
And we must keep Forest

Listen to the sounds of the jungle and look at the jungle pictures at the same time.

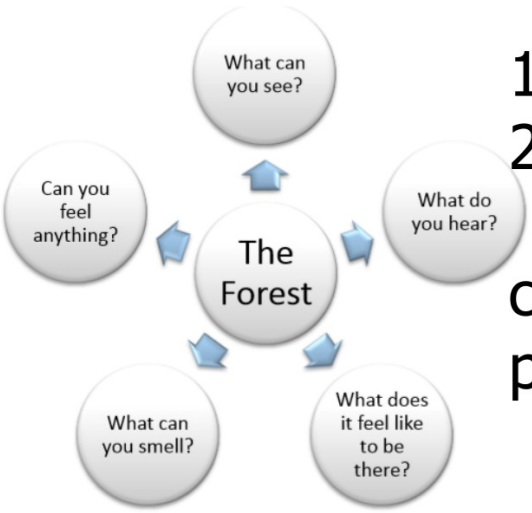
Now write similes and metaphors using the sounds and pictures to help you.

For example:

The sloth moving as slowly as time.

The birds wings moving as loudly as a storm.



1. Draw the map in your book.
2. Use your ideas from today and yesterday to help you complete your plan for your poem.
