magpie ideas to use.

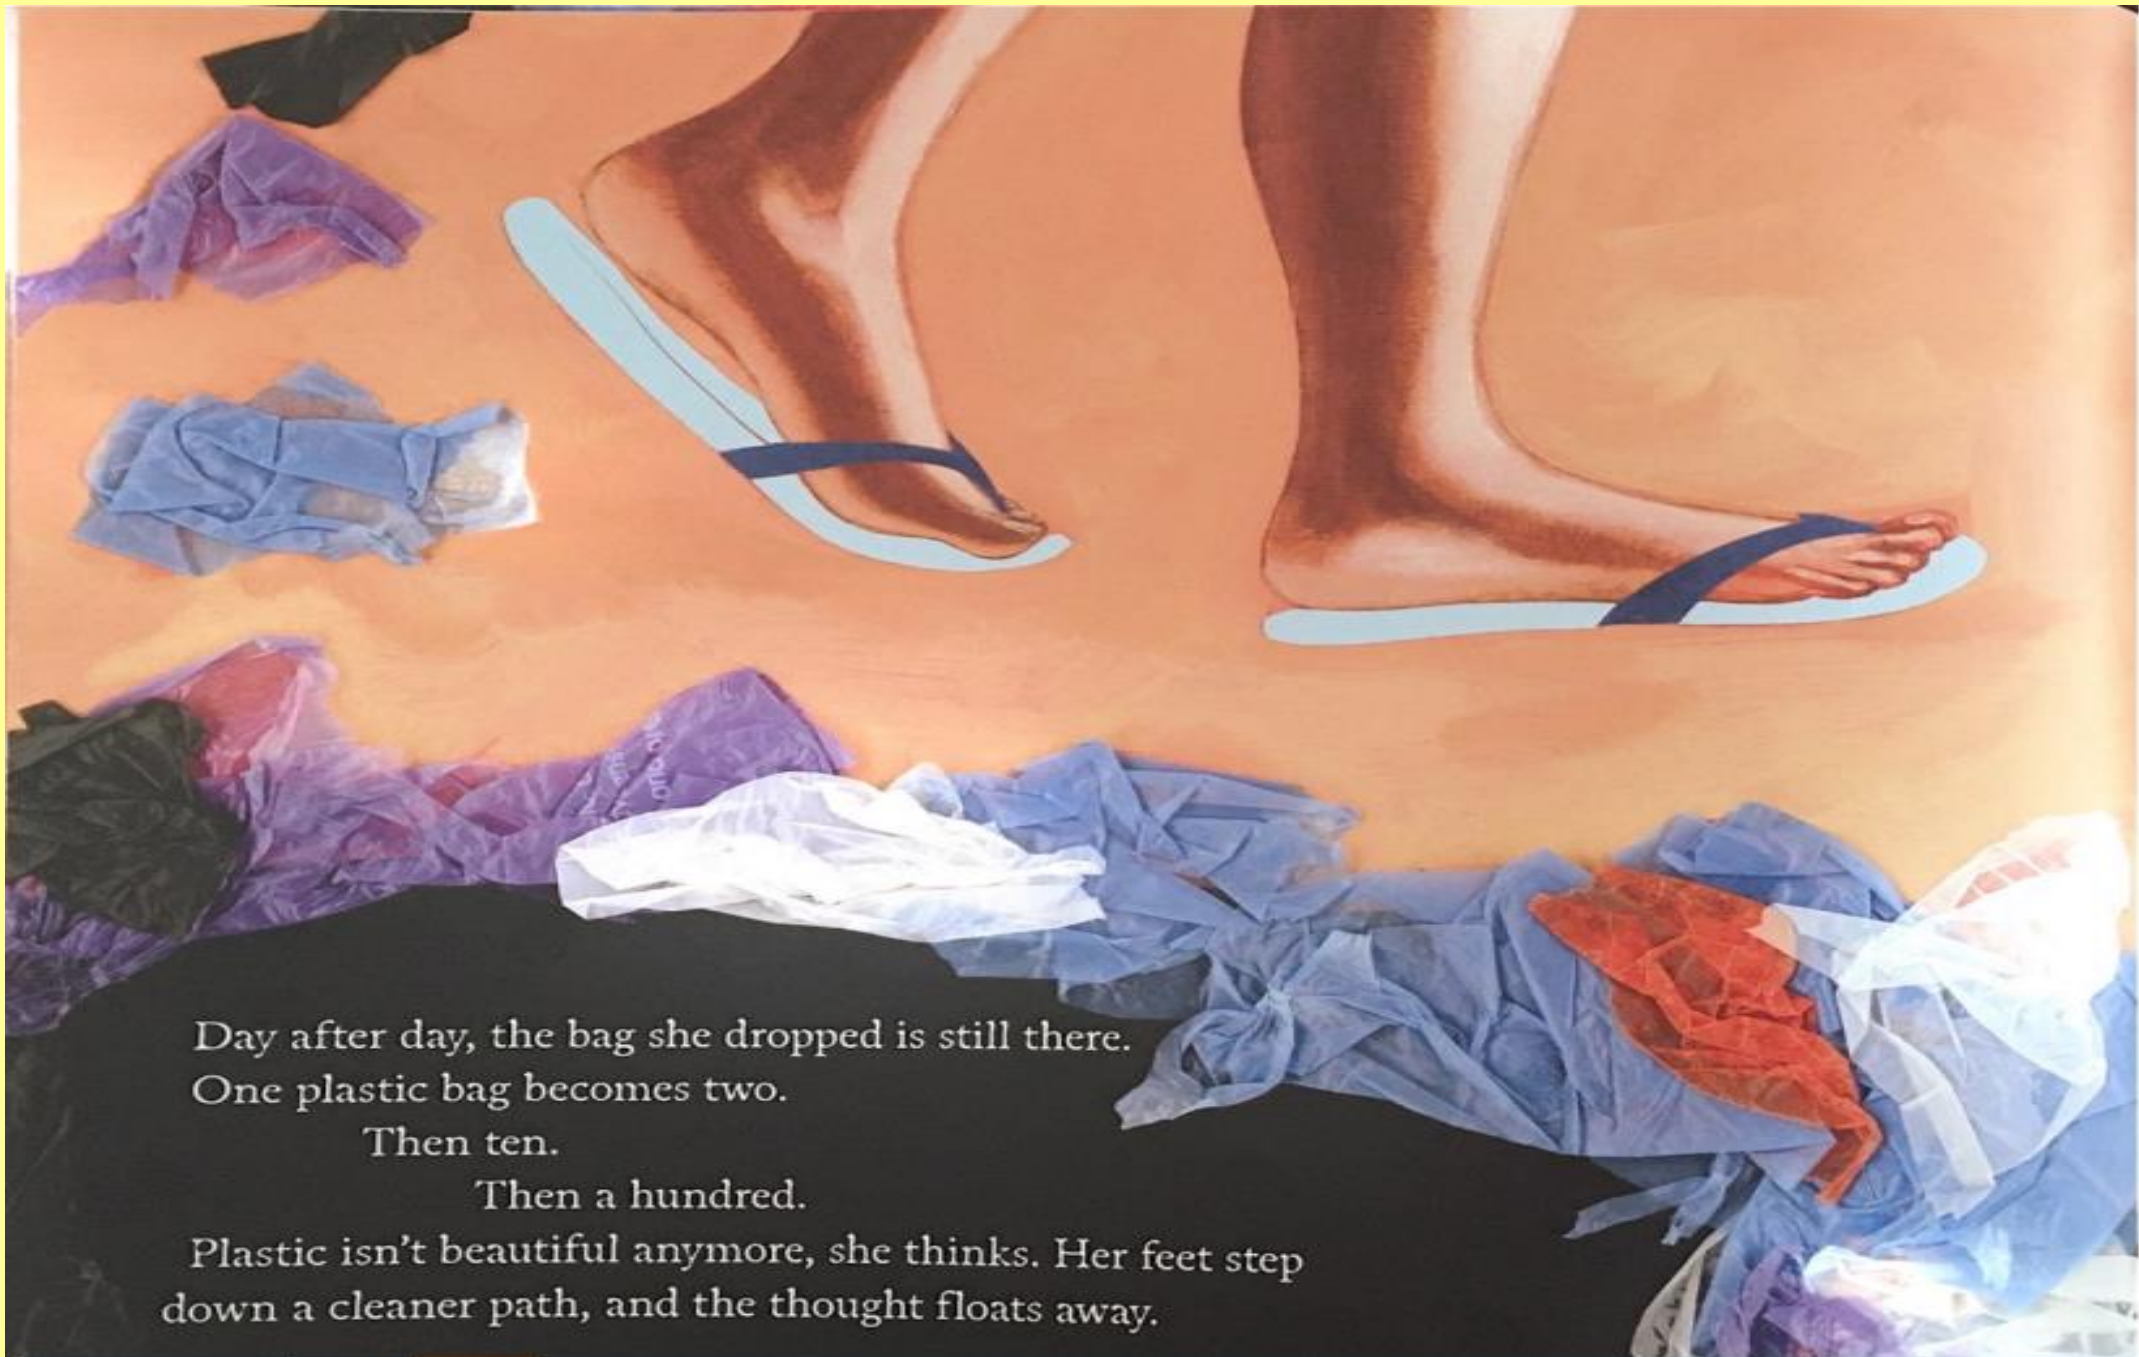

Read the next section of 'One Plastic Bag'

Why might this action be problematic based on your research on plastic?

Isatou shakes sand off her papers. Another plastic bag floats by, and she tucks her things inside.

The torn bag is useless now. She drops it to the dirt, as everyone does. There's nowhere else to put it.

Day after day, the bag she dropped is still there.
One plastic bag becomes two.

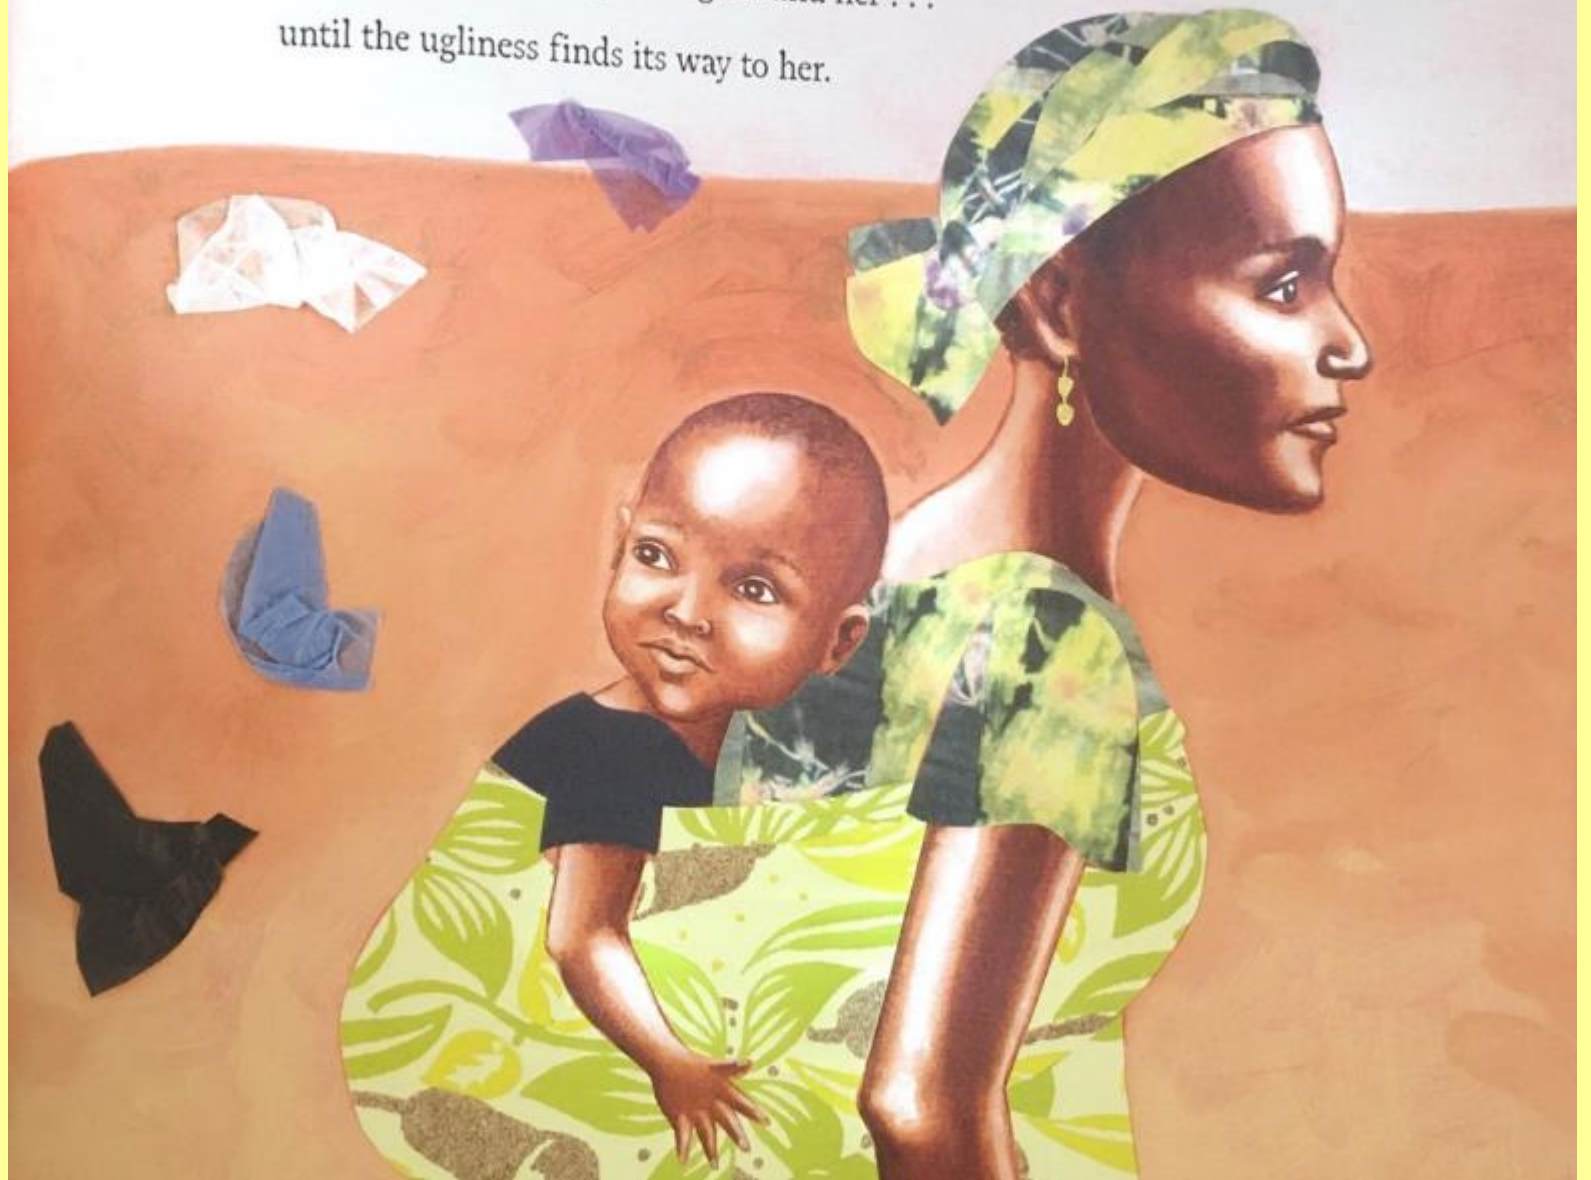

Then ten.

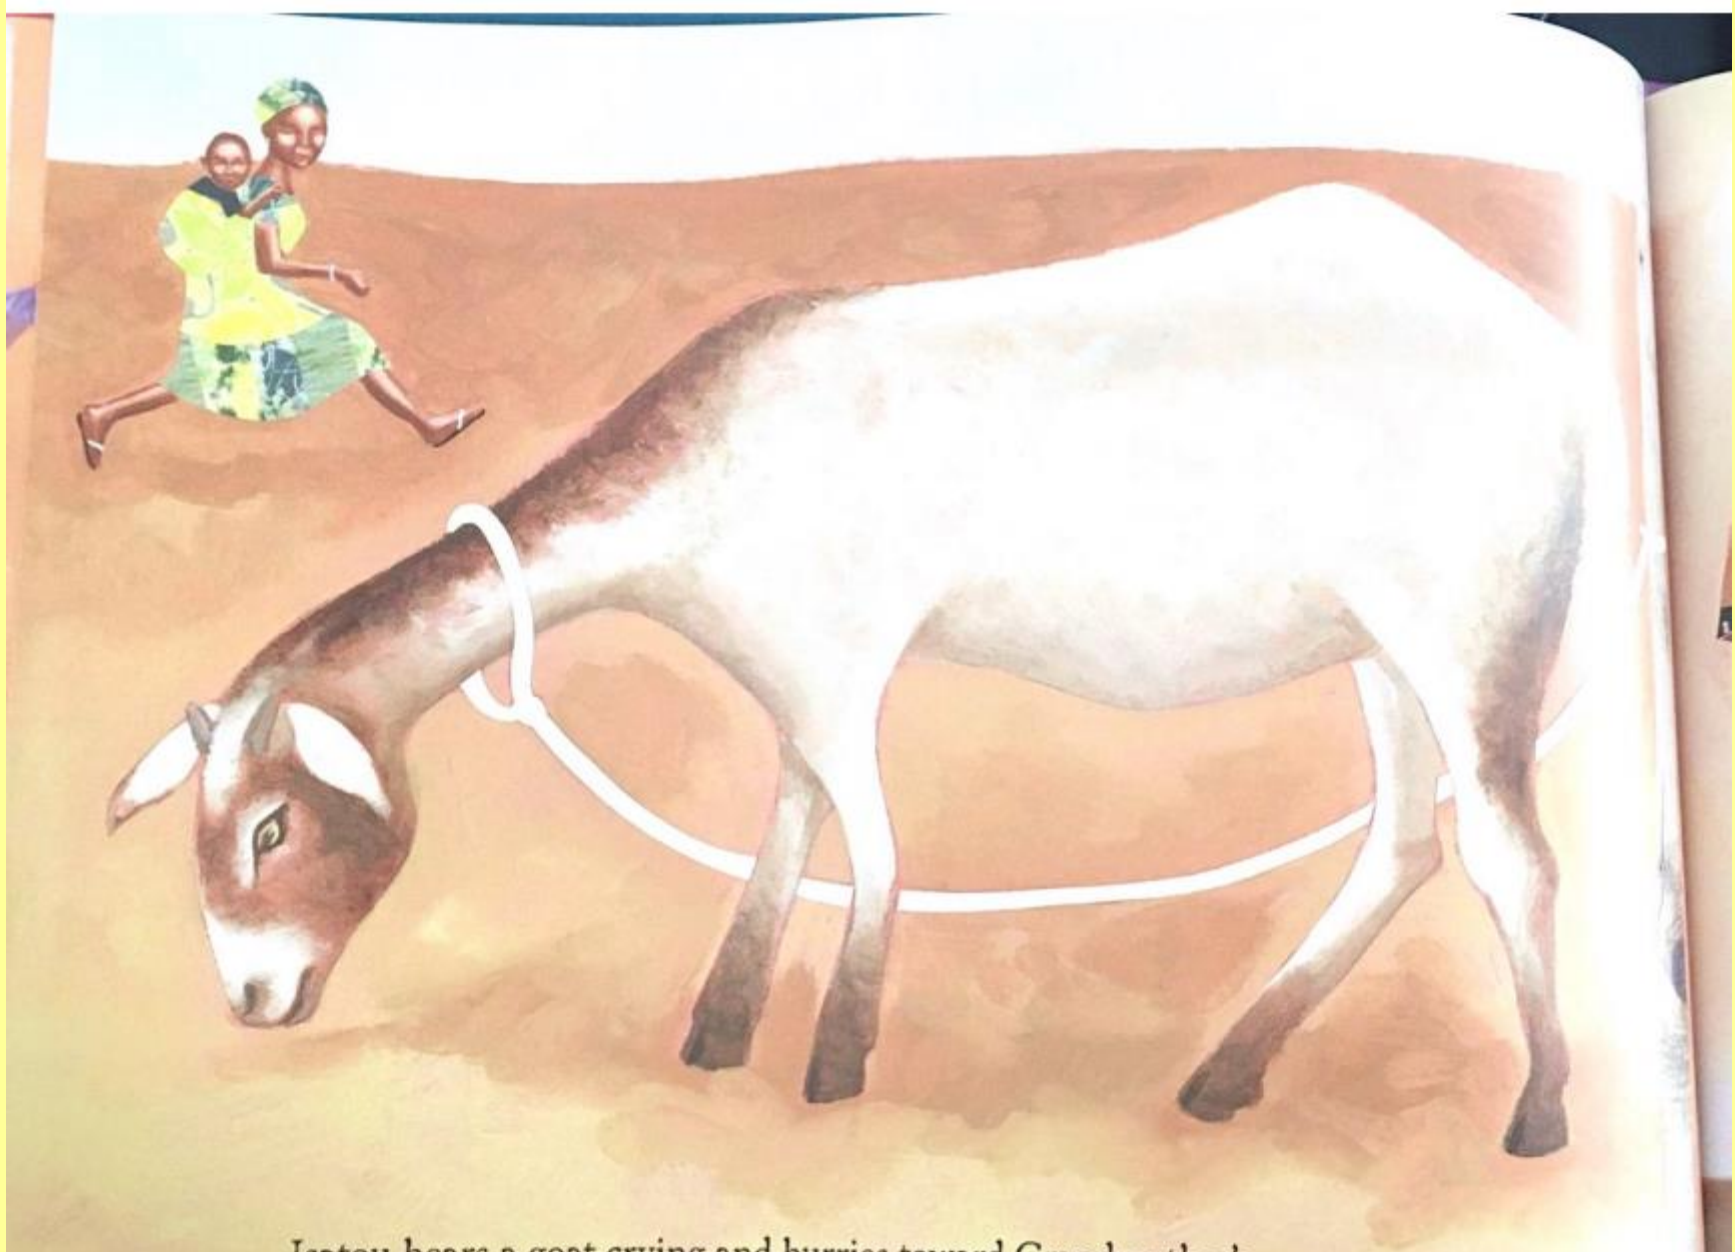

Then a hundred.

Plastic isn't beautiful anymore, she thinks. Her feet step down a cleaner path, and the thought floats away.

What might 'until the ugliness finds its way' mean?

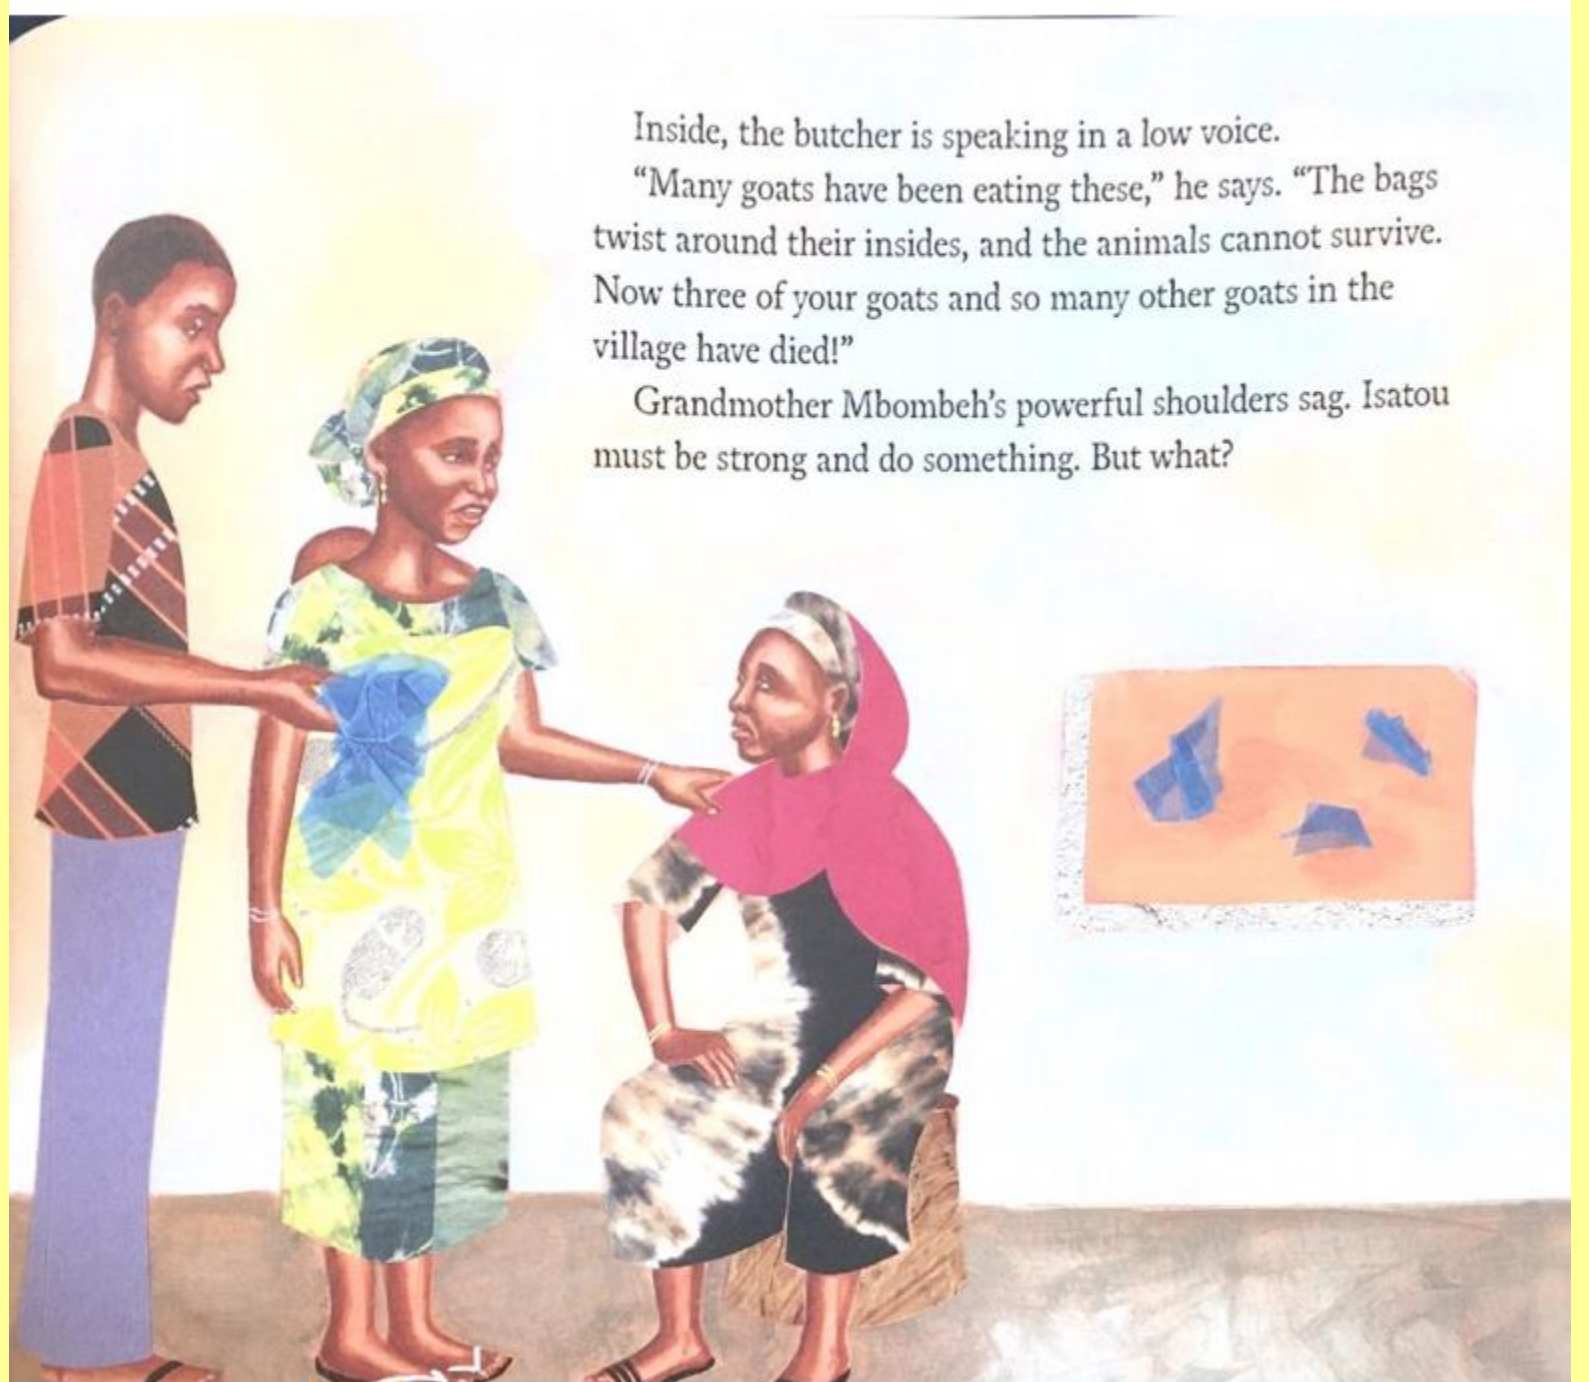

Years pass and Isatou grows into a woman. She barely notices the ugliness growing around her . . . until the ugliness finds its way to her.

Isatou hears a goat crying and hurries toward Grandmother's house. Why is it tied up? Where are the other goats?

What has been causing the animals to die?

Inside, the butcher is speaking in a low voice.
“Many goats have been eating these,” he says. “The bags twist around their insides, and the animals cannot survive. Now three of your goats and so many other goats in the village have died!”

Grandmother Mbombeh’s powerful shoulders sag. Isatou must be strong and do something. But what?
