Paolo Uccello- Retrieving information

Paolo Uccello was an Italian artist most well-known for his pioneering style in visual art perspective. He was born Paolo di Dono in 1397 in Pratovecchio, Italy, to his father Dono di Paolo, a barber-surgeon, and his mother Antonia, was from Florence.

By the age of only 10 Paolo was an apprentice to Lorenzo Ghiberti, a famous sculptor at the time. Paolo was greatly influenced by his mentor's narrative style. While apprenticing under Lorenzo, Paolo became friends with Donatello (a Renaissance sculptor), and they remained friends for life. Paolo was admitted to Florence's Painter's Guild in 1415, and he left his apprenticeship in about 1420 to work on his own. Paolo's nickname 'Uccello' came because of his fond habit of painting birds.

Paolo Uccello's most famous paintings are the three depicting the battle of San Romano. Each of these paintings were made with egg tempura, walnut oil and linseed oil on wooden panels. The panels are longer than three meters each.

Paolo Uccello's three painting depicting the Battle of San Romano include "Niccolo Mauruzi da Tolentino", "Niccolo Mauruzi da Tolentino unseats Bernardino della Ciarda", and "The Counterattack of Michelotto da Cotignola".

The Battle of San Romano paintings were commissioned by a Bartolini Salimbeni family member at some point between 1435 and 1460. The three paintings are divided between London's National Gallery, Florence's Galleria degli Uffizi, and Paris' Musee du Louvre.

Orla Kiely

Multi-Stem tomato design, originally published in 2000

‘It was all the natural beauty from my childhood that influenced my taste for colour – green moss and seaweed, the greys and browns of rainy Irish skies, the mustards of the wildflowers found on the roadside ...The first colours I chose for Stem were shades of green, orange and yellow. Nature is a great source of pattern ideas, and my personal take on it has always been abstract and graphic.’ Orla Kiely, 2018.

1. Visit this website to look at some of the flowers and plants that grow throughout the summer months:
