

Answers for Thursday's DGR

As these questions are based on inference skills, there are many possible answers to many of the questions. These answers offer a few suggestions.

1. I like the part where the writer says 'Suddenly, a sign arrives with shackles.' I love this metaphor because it helps us to think about how being in lockdown felt like we were in shackles.
2. I was surprised when the writer says 'Cawston Park sighs and smiles.' Because I felt the writer would want to portray the park as being happy to have children in it.
3. The poem made me think about not only the things I've missed in lockdown but how difficult it was for everyone.
4. How the world has changed.
5. He felt reflective on the effects of lockdown and a bit miserable.
6. He said the slide glares as there is no one on the slide and it's almost as if the slide has nothing to do but stare at things.
7. He is referring to the Thursday night clap for carers. Yes I miss it because it brought people together all over the country.
8. Any answers on how you feel, explaining why.
