

Today we are going to finish writing the whole of our rough draft story which you started yesterday.

I can finish my rough draft of an ending to the story from one of the character's point of view

Here are my examples again .

Throgil

Screeching, the dragonlets were all around me. Frustrated and hungry they were trying to smell where we were. Next to them was their blood thirsty mother, however her great, golden, green eyes were now completely closed, this was my only chance!

Silently, I tried to walk over to Jack but I soon realised this would not be possible because I had sprained my leg when the dragon threw us from the sky into this circle of stones. Like a slimy snake I dragged myself along the floor, that's when I remembered the bottle of magical, vanishing potion that Olaf had given me before he had died.

Example of the dragons point of view

I was very happy to see my children so interested when they saw their supper. Feeling delighted to start hunting them they hissed like a venomous snake .

Suddenly I lost concentration and heard someone shouting above me. It was my worst enemy – the majestic eagle. Carefully looking at my enemy I saw my children losing concentration as well.

Hearing my babies cry out I saw my prisoners trying to escape. “Go after them now!” I demanded angrily. With the blink of an eye they ran as fast as the wind. I could only see my children starving. They wanted food. The two young travellers , who I had captured for my dragonlets to devour , were escaping but I had to stay and fight the eagle.

Here are some ideas for possible endings ...

As we were riding on the back of the dragonlet , on our way to the Land of the Troll , we could see smoke drifting from the trees. We knew we had arrived and we were now safe. Olaf would be proud!

Once we had escaped Jack/ Thorgil and I started our long journey to the Land of the Troll. Weeks later we arrived- however, we felt a terrible feeling in the pit of our stomachs; this was not what we had expected

After escaping from the terrible clutches of the dragon and her evil dragonlets Jack/Thorgil and I could finally set off to the Land of the Troll.

You will be happy to know we reached there safely and so have completed Olaf's final quest .

Send your rough draft into your teacher then keep it in a safe place as tomorrow you will be up levelling it .
