There was once a handsome young warrior of the Desert people whose name was Wayambah. He was tall and strong, and a skilful hunter. He chose a wife from another tribe - the River people - which went against his own Desert people advice.

How the turtle got its shell

That evening as the sun was setting, they began their journey back to Wayambah's people. The journey took many days and when they got back to the Desert people they were not made welcome.

"Who is this woman you have brought with you?" the elders asked?

"She is my wife" he replied.

"You are a foolish young man" the elder said, "The warriors of the River people will not be pleased you have stolen one of their woman. They will track you down and kill you. If we try to defend you, there will be war."

"We must punish you ourselves," another of the elder said, "Before her people come to look for you." And they began to throw their fighting sticks at him.

Power, Fame or Fortune

I would rather be rich because rich people are smart that is why they were able to make the money.

What would you rather be powerful, handsome, clever or rich?

I would rather be clever of all things because its very good to have a good mind and to be smart in all subjects to help, discover and learn from mistakes.

The Boy, the mole, the fox and the horse

"What do you think is the biggest waste of time?"

"Comparing yourself to others," said the mole.

Our Questions Should we compare ourselves to others?

Some people are calm when they are being compared to. Sometimes if you compare yourself, you are letting yourself down.

Sometimes its okay to compare yourself to others depending on your situation. Because some people are different from others on aspects & their thoughts.
